Activity

Skiing

We skied the Throne today, near the skin track, and down low and to the north. With only a couple inches of new snow and zero wind there were no signs of instability. Our pit in the north facing chute had horrible structure, with the bottom half very faceted, but didn't offer any results. The wind hasn't blown up there for quite a while, so there's plenty of soft snow hanging around. When it does blow, it won't take long to become unstable.
