Sent a couple emails to mtavalanche.com with pics of a R3.9D11 that just missed me by inches last year. Just a heads up about Cornices and slabs

From email: "These pics are from last June 10-11, after the pass reopened on Friday. I was skiing the Gardner headwall at 5:30, solo, when this monster released. Yah. The initial cornice collapse triggered and entrained a secondary slab of varying thickness whose crown is seen in one of the photos."
