

Old crown, facets at fairy

Date

Sun, 11/10/2024 - 07:00

Activity

Skiing

I made it up to an old crown in a north-facing chute around Fairy Lake at around 9400 ft; it broke the night of 11/6 or the morning of 11/7. It looked like a wind slab that broke on a rotten layer of facets intermixed with scree. Found facets to be fairly widespread through the bottom of the snowpack on the north-facing slopes and surface hoar on most nonsolar slopes.

Region

Bridger Range

Location (from list)

Fairy Lake

Observer Name

Jay Alford